Programs & Courses

Comparative Literature, Cinema & Media is about exploring connections — connections among various literary, visual, and cultural traditions in a global world; connections between past and present; and connections across different academic disciplines and modes of intellectual inquiry. Our department offers the following Graduate and Undergraduate Degrees/Certificates:

- Graduate Degree
  - M.A. in Comp Lit
  - Ph.D. in Comp Lit
  - Textual Studies
  - Cinema and Media Studies

- Undergraduate Degree
  - Major: Cinema and Media Studies
  - Major: Comparative Literature (Literature or Cinema options)
  - Minor: Literature
  - Honors

Comparative Literature trains students in the critical analysis of texts, seeking to understand how the rhetorical and aesthetic features of those texts—whether literary, visual, or theoretical—negotiate and shape social values, attitudes, and beliefs. International in scope and interdisciplinary in orientation, our field emphasizes intellectual breadth and fosters intellectual initiative by maximizing students' opportunities to design their own courses of study.
